1.1 Introduction

Gender Based Violence (GBV) means all acts perpetrated against women, men, girls and boys on the basis of their sex which cause or could cause them physical, sexual, psychological, emotional or economic harm, including the threats to take such acts, or to undertake the imposition of arbitrary restrictions on or deprivation of fundamental freedoms in private or public life in peace time and during situations of armed or other forms of conflicts (Protocol on Gender and Development, 2008).

Statistically over two thirds of women in Botswana (67%) have experienced some forms gender based violence in their lifetime including partner and non-partner violence. A smaller, but still high, proportion of men (44%) admit to perpetrating violence against women (Gender Based Violence Indicators Study, Botswana, 2012).

1.2 Summary

The objectives of the project were:

1. To map gender based violence in Maun through a rapid sampling assessment
2. To identify women survivors who can be champions in speaking out on issues of gender based violence

The methodology used was participatory mapping where survivors of gender-based violence projected their experiences through oral narration and drawings. The sampling was done through random selection from the WAR database of clients who had accessed WAR services between 2009 and 2013. The sample included 23 female survivors and 5 male perpetrators divided into groups of 3 to 6 participants in each. The assessment was done in Maun and targeted all 19 wards.

The overall findings are that gender based violence occurs within intimate relationships and involves all types of gender-based violence: sexual, emotional and physical. The participants voiced that the starting point for reconciliation or redress in most cases of intimate partner violence was civil society organisations and government departments like district commissioner, social services and magistrate courts.

The male perpetrators reported alcohol abuse as a contributing factor to the abusive behaviour that they displayed which affected their partners, family and community.

1.3 Activities

The participants were invited for a consultative and information sharing meeting to prepare them for the project. Those willing and ready to participate completed consent and confidentiality forms. There were 36 potential participants selected from the WAR database and 8 declined to proceed with the process.

The participants were allocated into groups of 3 to 6 people according to age falling into three categories as follows: one group of 21 to 30 year olds, three groups of 31 to 43 years and one group of above 43 years. The time allocation was one hour per group and two groups per day. The actual time taken was between 1.5 hours and 3 hours depending on the number in the group. The participants were coded using letters of the alphabet instead of real names for confidentiality. Two counsellors facilitated this process and debriefing was done to bring the participants to a comfortable state.

The participants were guided by one of the counsellors through the use of a questionnaire to narrate and draw their experiences. The other facilitator took notes and observed the behaviour and reactions of the participants during the process. The participants were free to make choices in the colours they used in their drawings to depict the facts and emotions.

3.1 Summary of Findings

On mapping GBV experiences of women in Maun, there were 28 participants including 24 women aged between 21 to 45+ years and 4 men aged 31 to 45 years.

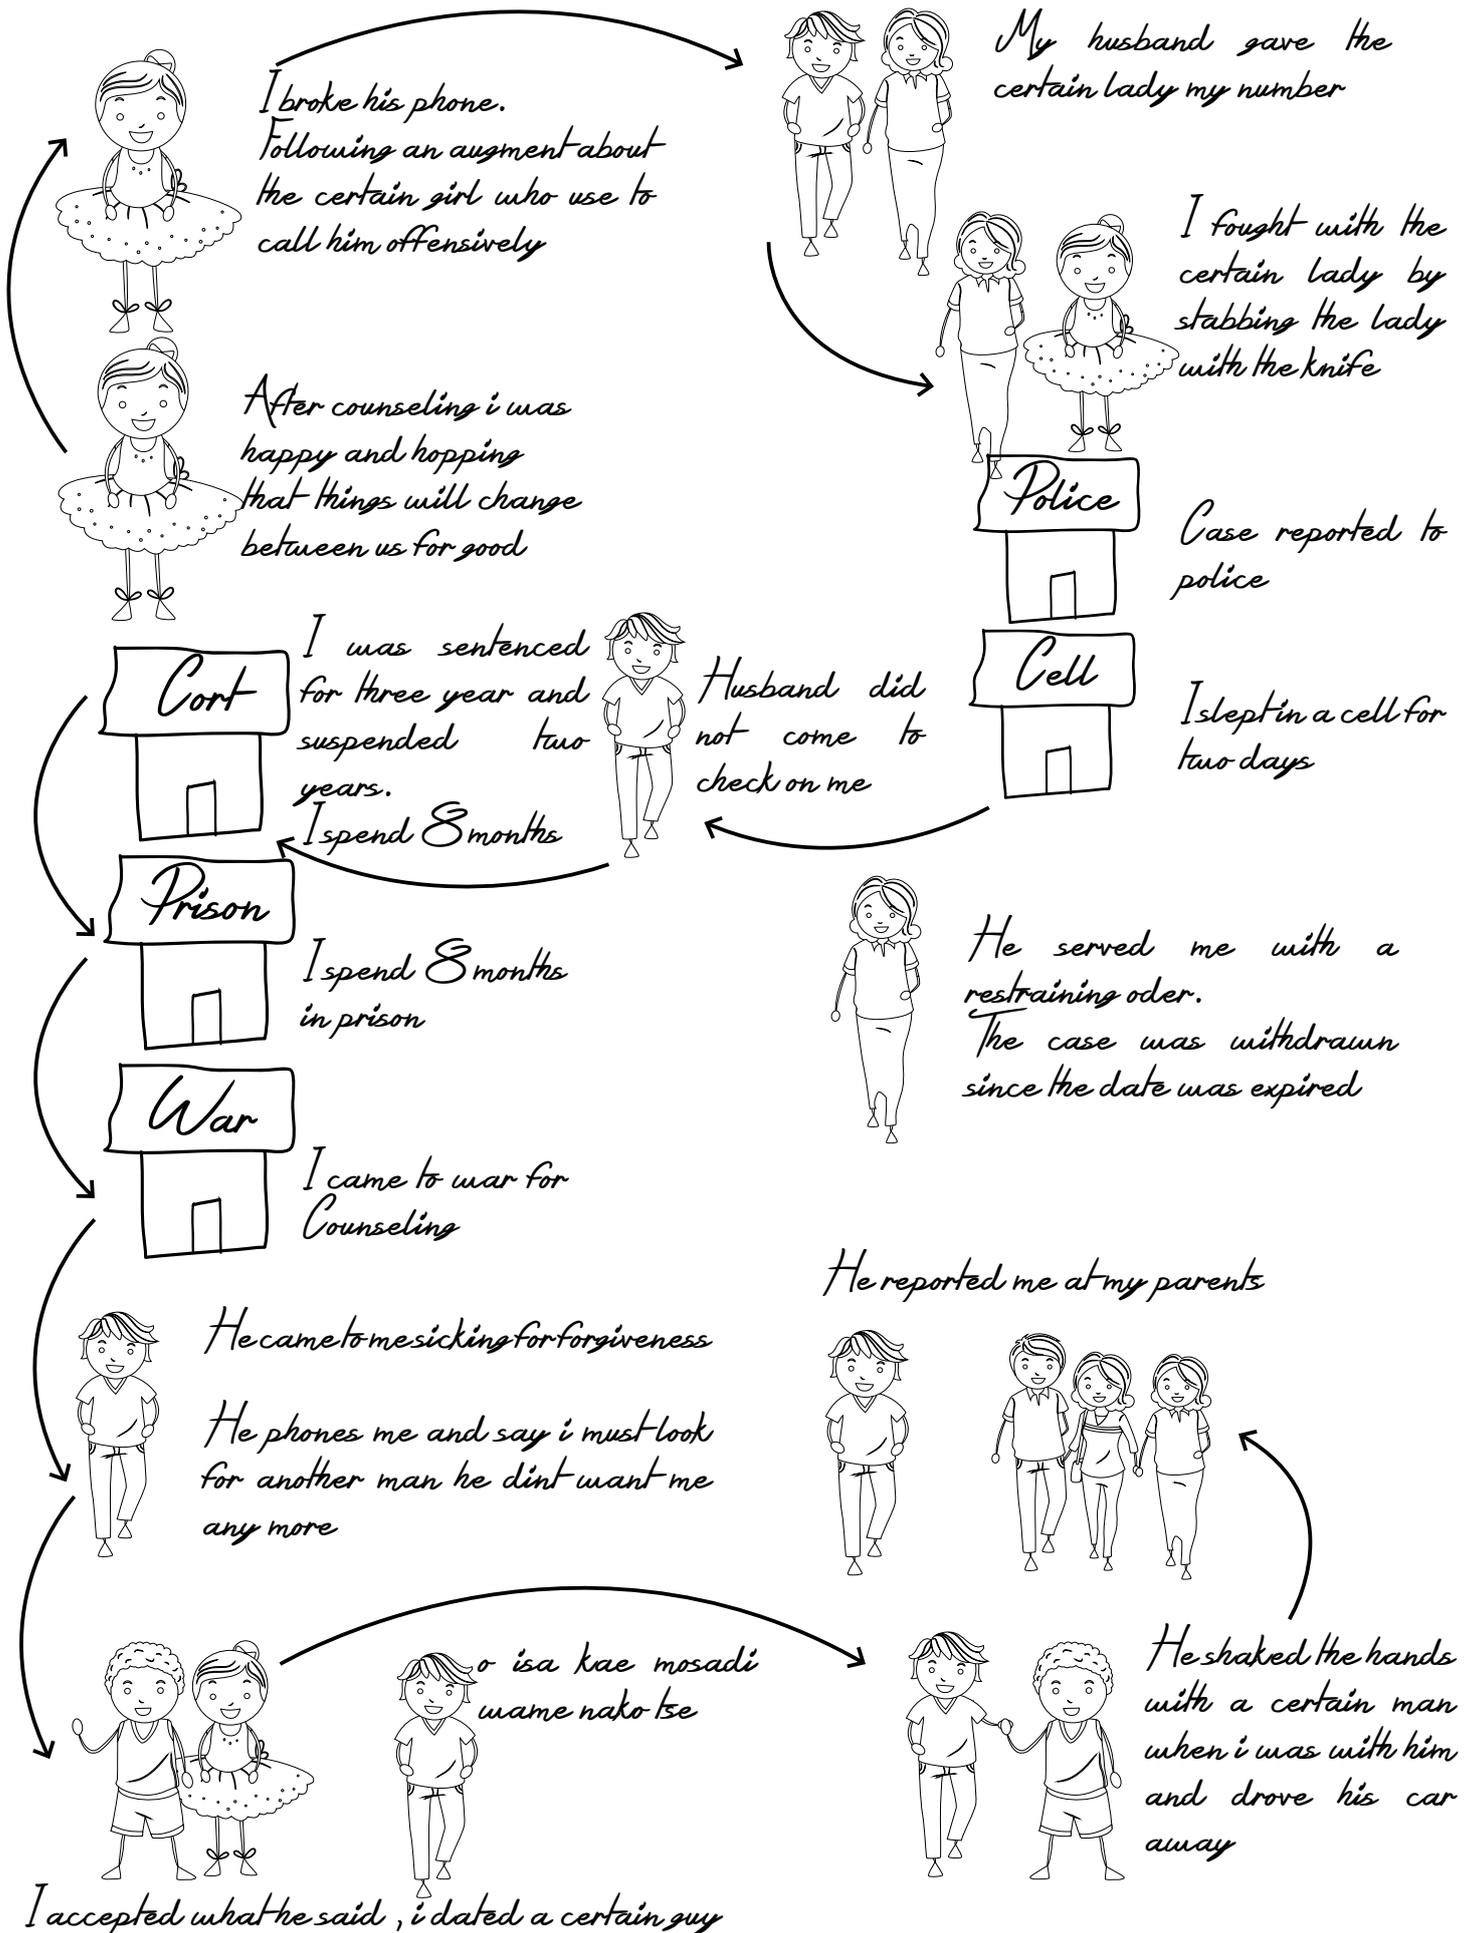

- Participants understood GBV as emotional abuse as well as physical abuse.
- The abuse is predominately emanating from intimate relationships: marital and cohabiting couples.
- There was a trend of cohabiting, deserting girlfriends and wives with children.
- Some of the participants experienced childhood sexual abuse.
- Overall participants knew where to report cases of GBV as they reported to civil society and government institutions, although others endured GBV before taking a step to report.
- Married, unmarried and adolescents women are abused emotionally (insults, name calling, humiliated, threats of death and abandoned) and physically (beating, strangulation, poisoning, burning) in relationships.
- Economic abuse is rife on women: wife and girlfriends were not allowed to do businesses, wives not involved in financial decision-making and abandonment.
- The in-laws of the brides perpetuate the abuse between spouses as they often take sides with their male child.
- Traditional counsellors were not utilised in solving issues as only 3 out of 28 participants reported their cases at the kgosi.
- Counselling was reported to be beneficial by most participants: 15 women and 3 men out of 28 participants displayed happy feelings in their lives while 9 women and one man were not happy and still continuing with counselling sessions.

3.2 Challenges

- Time constraints in selection and preparation of participants
- Emotional breakdown by participants during the process
- Some relational problems due to partner participation in this project
